RONULUS AUGUSTULUS - Son of ORESTES was deposed and banished by ODOACER, who thus put an end to the line of Western Roman Emperors.

JULIUS NEPOS was deposed by his army commander ORESTES.
In place of JULIUS NEPOS, he installed his son ROMULUS AUGUSTULUS (the little Augustus). But neither Orestes nor Augustulus had any real power that lay with the Germanic mercenaries who now dominated the Roman armies.

After 2 previous less successful negotiation attempts BISHOP ~~EPH~~ EPIPHANIUS of PAVIA arrived in Toulouse. He had clear imperial orders to make ~~peace~~ peace at all costs. By concluding a new treaty NEPOS accepted Emeric's conquest without relinquishing his legal claim to the prefecture of Badoit.

the civitas Avernorum was handed over to the Goths and Victorius established headquarters there; the city of Bourges itself was too exposed to serve as the center of Gothic administration.
SIDONIUS went into exile. For about 2 years he remained in confinement in the stronghold of LIVIA near CARCASSONNE. His nights were troubled: two perpetually drunk women disturbed his sleep by呱呱 and bawling below his window every night

Footnote 475

the Visigothic king, as highest-ranking military official of a Roman region had up to this time already been in charge of supervising the Catholic Church, his quasi-magisterial responsibility now changed into an emperorlike rule over the church.

is not the same as the old
but it
is still a good old
time
and we are very glad to have you
back
again
hope
you
will have a
good
time
here
and we will
see
you
soon

But even in 475, after conclusion of a new treaty, the Visigothic Kingdom remained beyond the pale of imperial law. ANTHEMIUS's novellae were the first laws that were not incorporated with the lex Romana Visigothorum.

Basiliscus in the East ejected Zeno and snatched the diadem. He did this by ~~use~~ the aid of Terveric mercenaries whose commander was the Ostrogothic soldier of fortune Theodoric, called ^{Stilicho} Stilbo - the wall-eyed or one-eyed -

The PATRICIUS ORESTES chose out the legitimate emperor Nepos and made his own son emperor. But the impulsion of the AUGUSTULUS was no more than an intermezzo. After this ODOVACAR stepped into the Italian stage where the drama "Western Roman Empire" was being performed
